I. Public social policy

1. Section 1: Public Social

- TCC social accounts are designated for official TCC-related content, including proposals, updates, and team-related announcements. Individual posts from member accounts are regarded as personal opinions and may not represent group decisions. However, member posts are encouraged and protected under "Section 2: Public Social Rules."
- TCC social accounts will host official TCC spaces, talks, and AMAs. Member participation on other social accounts is considered personal opinion and not necessarily reflective of group decisions. Participation is encouraged and protected under "Section 2: Public Social Rules."

- TCC social accounts serve as the sole channel for providing technical support and discussions. This is intended to notify all available technical members within the coalition, ensuring timely engagement and support for technical matters.

2. Section 2: Public Social Rules

- Members must maintain respect for fellow TCC members on all public platforms, refraining from personal attacks. Repeated public attacks against a TCC member will be considered a violation.

II. Shared resources policy

- TCC social accounts and communication groups are shared resources among all members. Denying access to a member is considered a violation.
- Communication groups are shared resources among all members. Inviting new members to communication groups requires unanimous agreement from all existing members. Unauthorized invitations will be seen as a violation.

III. Governance policy

- Governance proposals related to at least three TCC members will undergo internal discussions. A proposal can only proceed publicly if all members agree on its details. Lack of response within 5 days from the initial request will be considered agreed.
- Unapproved governance attacks or proposals involving at least three TCC members will be treated as violations.

IV. Disputes policy

- Parties involved in disputes are expected to handle conflicts calmly, refraining from personal attacks. Heated debates are permissible and protected.
- In cases of unresolved or escalated disputes, a mutually agreed-upon, trusted third party will mediate. Both parties will fully adhere to the decision of the appointed mediator.

V. Coalition policy

- This MoU forms the cornerstone of the coalition. Any proposed changes to the MoU necessitate unanimous approval from all members.
- TCC members will engage in group activities on a voluntary basis and will never seek community funding outside of chain development works.
- Proposals for community-funded development must be in the form of pay-per-job.

VI. Termination policy

- Members have the autonomy to terminate their membership at any time without fear of reprisal from other TCC members.
- Repeated violations by a member may lead to consideration for revocation of their member status by others. If revoked, such individual will not face attacks from TCC members for the termination.
- The coalition will be dissolved if internal disputes cannot be resolved through agreed-upon methods outlined in this MoU. If ongoing conflicts hinder the coalition's ability to function effectively, the collective agreement to disband will be reached by all members. Signers commit to disbanding peacefully, respectfully in a mature manner.
